LITERARY NOTES.

THE November number of The Centus Its November number of The Century is to have three short stories—"A Cloud on the Mountain," by Mary Hallock Foote, with a full-page illustration by the author; "The Mystery of William Rutter," by Helen Jackson (H. H.), and "The Story of Seven Devils," by Frank R. Stockton. Mrs. Foote's new novel, "John Bodewin's Testimony," the first chapters of white are wie usue, will run through six or eight numbers of The Century. THE St. Louis weekly Medical Review a:

nual of Obstetrics and Diseases of Women continues to maintain the promise of its publishers and keeps abreast of the latest and surgery, in Europe as well as in this country. Its reports of society meetings, discussions and lectures are invaluable, and its editorials are well written and are always devoted to live subjects. J. H. Chambers, St. Louis and Chicago, publishers.

GEN. GRANT'S paper on "Chattanoogs t takes up the writer's military career a Vicksburg, and follows the campaign of Chattanooga from the beginning of his connection with it. The motives and con-duct of the campaign are said to be set before the reader fully and clearly, and with much personal interest. His "Willerness" article, which is to follow soon, is description of the preparations made for the Wilderness campaign, by which Gen. Grant meant the movement of all the Union armies begun in May, 1864. ALL ARE CORDIALLY INVITED THE Chicago Sanitary News has issued in samphlet form a report of the committee of the Citizens' Association on the main drainage and water supply of Chicago, accompanied by maps, that is invaluable as showing the necessity for a great deal of extensive, and therefore costly, work to name that city in something like an adequate system of drainage and secure it unpolluted drinking water. tables of the weekly movement of cotton in United States ports, New York, Liverdaily receipts, and many other particulars are given fully. This handsome book is not to be had for money; it is a splendid present from Latham, Alexander & Co. to friends and correspondents. THE November number of the Southe Bivouse will contain an exceedingly graphic article detailing the movements of Lee's army from the time he crossed the Potomac to the night before the battle of Gettysburg. The writer, Wm. H. Swai-low, was formerly assistant adjutant general of the Army of Northern Virginia. He presents some new facts concerning the orders under which Gen. Stuart was marching, and contends that Lee's original where the army was to be concentrated, and it was with this understanding that Stuart separated from his main army and moved through Hanover toward Carliele.
